

THE WALL STREET JOURNAL.

This copy is for your personal, non-commercial use only. To order presentation-ready copies for distribution to your colleagues, clients or customers visit <http://www.djreprints.com>.

<http://www.wsj.com/articles/how-overseas-buyers-can-get-a-mortgage-for-a-u-s-home-1472655409>

REAL ESTATE | JUMBO JUNGLE

How Overseas Buyers Can Get a Mortgage for a U.S. Home

Many foreign buyers who finance a U.S. home will need private loans, which typically have higher down payments and interest rates

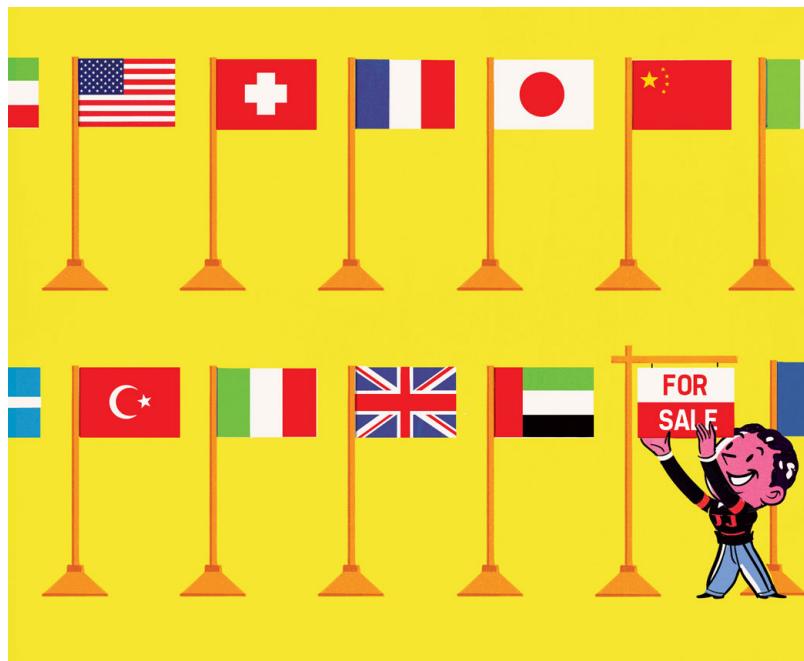

ILLUSTRATION: CHRIS GASH

By ANYA MARTIN

Aug. 31, 2016 10:56 a.m. ET

Amid economic instability and global turmoil, foreign buyers in recent years have found an appealing place to park their money in U.S. real estate.

Now, rising U.S. home prices and a strong dollar mean overseas buyers will need more money to buy a home here. Last year, 50% of foreign buyers paid cash for U.S. residential real estate, according to the National Association of Realtors (NAR). Mortgage financing, however, is another option.

“Most [overseas buyers] don’t think they can get a loan, so they pay cash. But they’d much rather take a loan, even if they have to put down 40%,” says Chris Furie, a partner at Los Angeles-based Insignia Mortgage. “It allows them to be able to afford something a little more expensive.”

MORE JUMBO JUNGLE

- Attention, Jumbo-Mortgage Shoppers: Deals Ahead Aug. 23, 2016
- How to Finance a Vacation Home That’s Also a Short-Term Rental Aug. 3, 2016
- A Reverse Mortgage to Buy a Home? Here’s How July 20, 2016
- How a Condo Association Could Kill a Sale July 13, 2016

Nonresident foreign nationals aren’t eligible for government-backed conventional loans or most jumbo mortgages, which are loans that exceed the allowable thresholds of $417,000 in most parts of the country and $625,500 in some high-price areas. While most lenders, including big banks, see the prospect of chasing a delinquent borrower overseas as too risky, some, such as Milford, Conn.-based Total Mortgage Services, offer nonconforming loans to affluent foreign borrowers and then sell them to an emerging market of nontraditional lenders, says Total Mortgage CEO John Walsh.

“The applicant goes through the standard qualifying process using alternative forms of verification for credit, income and assets,” Mr. Walsh says. Total Mortgage now can lend from $200,000 up to $2 million to well-qualified, nonresident foreigners.

However, these loans require a larger down payment than most mortgages—30% and up on loans up to $1 million and more for larger loans for a second-home purchase, Mr. Walsh says. Rates range from 5% on a five-year, adjustable-rate mortgage to 6.625% on a 30-year, fixed-rate mortgage, Mr. Walsh says.

In California, Insignia Mortgage closed $80 million in purchase and refinance mortgages to foreign nationals over the past 12 months; the backing comes mostly from regional banks, says Insignia partner Damon Germanides. Available programs require a minimum loan amount of $500,000 up to $7 million for three-, five- or seven-year ARMs with current rates starting in the high 2% to high 3% range for the initial fixed-rate period, Mr. Germanides says.

Foreign borrowers often find the best rates and a smoother qualification process through banks that have operations both in their home countries and in the U.S., says Mathew Carson, owner of San Francisco-based West County Mortgage. London-based HSBC, which has offices in 71 countries and territories, has been a leader in this market, and Citibank also has a program.

Chinese borrowers may use Pasadena, Calif.-based East West Bank, which has offices in China. Other lenders include Miami-based TotalBank, a member of Madrid-based Grupo Banco Popular, and Mount Laurel, N.J.-based TD Bank, a subsidiary of TD Bank Group in Toronto.

For example, TD Bank offers Canadian borrowers a “cross-border” program with adjustable-rate mortgages for U.S. second homes, says Ray Rodriguez, the bank’s regional sales manager for metro New York. “We charge the same rates as to U.S. customers and have the same underwriting,” he adds. “It’s 20% down whether you are living in New York or Toronto.”

Borrowers don’t have to have a TD Bank account to qualify for the loan, Mr. Rodriguez says.

Here are a few more tips that foreign borrowers should keep in mind:

- What’s needed. Since most foreign borrowers have no U.S. credit history or tax returns, qualification is based on tax returns and bank statements from their home country, Mr. Germanides says. Alternate forms of documentation may include a letter from an accountant or tax adviser stating income and assets, and at least six months of credit-card statements, he adds.
- Don’t be surprised. The mortgage-qualification process in the U.S. is vastly different from other countries, Mr. Rodriguez says. For example, U.S. mortgages require more documentation than Canadian loans, which also often close in as little as a week, versus the usual 30 days or more for a U.S. loan, he adds.
- Apply ahead. Given that the qualification process is more complicated and time consuming, going the extra step of submitting documentation and getting pre-underwritten is advised, Mr. Furie says.

Independent of The Wall Street Journal newsroom.

INDUSTRIES

This isn't a normal iPhone upgrade — and Apple will be just fine

MarketWatch

THE WALL STREET JOURNAL.

Independent of The Wall Street Journal newsroom.

NEWS

Smart Home: Upgrade Your Entertainment System

MANSION GLOBAL

ASIA NEWS

North Korean Vice Premier Executed, South Says

THE WALL STREET JOURNAL.

Copyright 2014 Dow Jones & Company, Inc. All Rights Reserved

This copy is for your personal, non-commercial use only. Distribution and use of this material are governed by our Subscriber Agreement and by copyright law. For non-personal use or to order multiple copies, please contact Dow Jones Reprints at 1-800-843-0008 or visit www.djreprints.com.